16th Sunday in Ordinary Time

Below are key excerpts from Sunday's readings

First Reading:

For your might is the source of justice; your mastery over all things makes you lenient to all. (Wis 12:16)

Psalm:

Lord, you are good and forgiving. (Ps 86)

Second Reading:

And the one who searches hearts knows what is the intention of the Spirit, because he intercedes for the holy ones according to God's will. (Rom 8:27)

Gospel:

"The kingdom of heaven is like a mustard seed that a person took and sowed in a field. It is the smallest of all the seeds, yet when full-grown it is the largest of plants." (Mt 13:31-32)

Meditation on Sunday's Gospel

Matthew 13:24-43

A man recently told me he was losing patience with the Church. "It's supposed to be God's Kingdom on earth," he said, "but it's full of contradictions and hypocrisy. Why can't the Church just be better?" That last word landed with a judgmental thud. It hurt. Because at times the Church can look painfully ordinary, even disappointing.

But Jesus' parables in today's Gospel meet that frustration head-on. He says, "The kingdom of heaven may be likened to a man who sowed good seed in his field," yet the weeds grow up with the wheat, and the master allows both to grow together until harvest. To his listeners, this sounded strange, even offensive. They expected God's reign to be pure, powerful, and glorious, anything but mixed up, hidden, or small.

Jesus is showing us something essential. The Kingdom always begins small and grows amid imperfection. Grace and weakness exist side by side until the harvest. That is why the Church often looks messy. Yet within that mess, God's quiet work continues. The weeds do not stop the wheat from growing.

When we see the Church's flaws or our own, it helps to remember that this is exactly the field in which Christ chose to plant. The miracle is not that everything looks perfect, but that his Word keeps taking root anyway.

Lord, give me patience with Your field, the Church. Help me see Your hidden life growing even among the weeds. Amen.

— Father John Muir

Questions of the week

1st Reading Question

Wisdom speaks of God's power in terms of kindness, leniency, and mercy.

What words would you use to describe God?

2nd Reading Question

Paul explains that the Spirit intercedes on our behalf, especially when we struggle in our prayer life.

How can the Spirit help you in your prayer life?

Gospel Question

In the parable of the weeds and the wheat, Jesus warns the disciples of the presence of the devil active in the world. How do we stay on guard against the evil one?

Congratulations, Father Charlie Leidel!

OLPH parish congratulates former seminarian Charlie Leidel on his recent ordination to the priesthood! Charlie served OLPH for three years under Mundelein Seminary's Tolton Teaching Parish Program, participating in Sunday liturgies and contributing his talents to the Men's Spirituality Group, the OLPH Youth Group, Family Religious Education, and the Bereavement Ministry.

On June 20 in the Diocese of Grand Rapids, Bishop David Walkowiak ordained Deacon Charlie to the priesthood, along with fellow deacons Logan McGahan and Hunter Ostapowicz. The Mass with Rite of Ordination took place at the Cathedral of Saint Andrew. A reception in honor of the newly-ordained priests followed the service where family and friends gathered to celebrate and receive first blessings.

The next morning, Sunday, June 21, Father Charlie celebrated a Mass of Thanksgiving at the historic Basilica of St. Adalbert, accompanied by over a dozen concelebrant priests, including Charlie's brother Fr. Samuel Mary, who delivered the homily.

Effective July 1, Fr. Charlie will serve as parochial vicar of the Shrine of Saint Francis Xavier and Our Lady of Guadalupe Parish in Grand Rapids, where he may be reached via email at cleidel@sfxolg.org.

Summer with St. Francis

From the book The Life of St. Francis written by St. Bonaventure, a Franciscan monk and mystic, in 1260.

Week 6, Chapter 4 - Part 1

On the Progress of the Order and the Confirmation of the Rule Strengthened by God's grace and the pope's approval, Francis with great confidence took the road toward the valley of Spoleto, where he intended to preach and to live the Gospel of Christ. On the way he discussed with his companions how they should sincerely keep the rule which they had taken upon themselves, how they should proceed in all holiness and justice before God, and how they should improve themselves and be an example for others.

It was already late in the day as they continued their long discussion. Fatigued from their prolonged activity and feeling hungry, they stopped at an isolated spot. When there seemed to be no way for them to get the food they needed, God's providence immediately came to their aid. For suddenly a man appeared carrying bread in his hand, which he gave to Christ's little poor, and then suddenly disappeared. They had no idea where he came from or where he went.

From this, the poor friars realized that while, in the company of the man of God, they would be given assistance from heaven, and so they were refreshed more by the gift of God's generosity than by the food they had received for their bodies. Moreover, filled with divine consolation, they firmly resolved and irrevocably committed themselves never to turn back from the promise they had made to holy poverty, in spite of any pressure from lack of food or other trials.

When they arrived at the valley of Spoleto full of their holy plans, they began to discuss whether they should live among the people or go often into places of solitude. But Christ's servant Francis did not place his trust in his own efforts or those of his companions; rather he fought to discern God's will in this matter by earnest prayer.

Then, enlightened by a revelation from heaven, he realized that he was sent by the Lord to win for Christ the souls which the devil was trying to snatch away. Therefore he chose to live for all men rather than for himself alone, drawn by the example of the one who deigned to die for all.

St. Francis teaching "The Rule."

Then with his companions the man of God took shelter in an abandoned hut near the town of Assisi, where they barely subsisted according to the rule of holy poverty in much labor and want, drawing their nourishment more from the bread of tears than from the delights of bodily food. They spent their time there praying incessantly, devoting themselves to mental rather than vocal prayer because they did not yet have liturgical books from which to chant the canonical hours. In place of these, they had the book of Christ's Cross, which they studied continually day and night, taught by the example and words of their father Francis, who spoke to them constantly about the cross of Christ. When the friars asked him to teach them to pray, he said: "When you pray, say 'Our Father...' and 'We adore you O Christ, in all your churches in the whole world,' and 'We bless you because by your Holy Cross you have redeemed the world.'"

He also taught them to praise God in all creatures and from all creatures, to honor priests with special reverence, and to firmly believe and simply profess the true faith as held and taught by the Holy Roman Church. The friars followed his teaching in every detail; and before every church and crucifix which they saw, even from a distance, they humbly prostrated themselves and prayed according to the form he had taught them.

While the friars were still staying in the place already mentioned, one Saturday the holy man went to the town of Assisi to preach in the cathedral on Sunday morning, as was his custom. The devoted man of God spent the night in prayer, as he usually did, in a hut situated in the garden of the canons, separated physically from the friars. At about midnight, while some of the friars were resting and others continued to pray, behold, a fiery chariot of wonderful brilliance entered through seek, share, rejoice - the way...

the door of the house and turned here and there three times through the house. A globe of light rested above it which shone like the sun and lit up the night.

Those who were awake were dumbfounded, and those who were sleeping woke up terrified. They felt the brightness light up their hearts no less than their bodies, and the conscience of each was laid bare to the others by the strength of that marvelous light. As they looked into each other's hearts, they all realized together that their holy father Francis, who was absent physically, was present in spirit, transfigured in this image. And they realized that by supernatural power the Lord had shown him to them in this glowing chariot of fire, radiant with heavenly splendor and inflamed with burning ardor so that they might follow him like true Israelites.

Like a second Elijah, God had made him a chariot and charioteer for spiritual men. Certainly we can believe that God opened the eyes of the simple men at the prayers of Francis so that they might see the wonders of God, just as he had once opened the eyes of the servant of Elisha so that he could see "the mountain full of horses and chariots of fire round the prophet." (2 Kings 6:17)

When the holy man returned to the friars, he began to probe the secrets of their consciences, to draw courage for them from this wonderful vision, and to make many predictions about the growth of the Order. When he disclosed many things that transcended human understanding, the friars realized the spirit of the Lord had come to rest upon him in such fullness that it was absolutely safe for them to follow his life and teaching.

After this, under the guidance of heavenly grace, the shepherd Francis led the flock of twelve friars to St. Mary of the Portiuncula, so that there, where the Order of Friars Minor had had its beginning by the merits of the mother of God, it might also begin to grow with her assistance. There, also, he became a herald of the Gospel. He went about the towns and villages proclaiming the kingdom of God not in words taught by human wisdom, but in the power of the Spirit.

To those who saw him, he seemed to be a man of another world as, with his mind and face always turned toward heaven, he tried to draw them all on high. As a result, the vineyard of Christ began to sprout shoots with the fragrance of the Lord and to bring forth abundant fruit, producing blossoms of sweetness, of honor and goodness.

Set on fire by the fervor of his preaching, a great number of people bound themselves by new laws of penance according to the rule which they received from the man of God. Christ's servant decided to name this way of life the Order of the Brothers of Penance. As the road of penance is common to all who are striving toward heaven, so this way of life admits clerics and laity, single and married of both sexes.

How meritorious it is before God is clear from the numerous miracles performed by some of its members. Young women, too, were drawn to perpetual celibacy, among whom was the maiden Clare, who was especially dear to God. She was the first tender sprout among these and gave forth fragrance like the bright white flower that blossoms in springtime, and she shone like a radiant star. Now she is glorified in heaven and venerated in a fitting manner by the church on earth, she who was the daughter in Christ of our holy father Francis, the little poor man, and the mother of the Poor Clares.

Many people also, not only stirred by devotion but inflamed by a desire for the perfection of Christ, despised the emptiness of worldly things and followed in the footsteps of Francis. Their numbers increased daily and quickly reached to the ends of the Earth. Holy poverty, which was all they had to meet their expenses, made them prompt for obedience, robust for work, and free for travel.

Because they possessed nothing that belonged to the world, they were attached to nothing and feared to lose nothing. They were safe everywhere, not held back by fear, nor distracted by care; they lived with untroubled minds, and, without any anxiety, looked forward to the morrow and to finding a lodging for the night.

In different parts of the world many insults were hurled against them as persons unknown and despised. But their love of the Gospel of Christ had made them so patient that they sought to be where they would suffer physical persecution rather than where their holiness was recognized and they could glory in worldly honor. For their very poverty seemed to them overflowing abundance since, according to the advice of the wise man, they were content with a minimum as if it were much.

When some of the friars went to the lands of the infidels, a certain Saracen, moved by compassion, once offered them money for the food they needed. When they refused to accept it, the man was amazed, seeing that they were without needs. Realizing they did not want to possess money because they had become poor out of love for God, he felt so attracted to them that he offered to provide for their needs as long as he had something to give.

O inestimable value of poverty, whose marvelous power moved the fierce heart of a barbarian to such sweet compassion! What a horrible and unspeakable crime that a Christian should trample under foot this noble pearl which a Saracen held in such veneration!
