Meditation on Sunday's Gospel

Matthew 16:13-20

The first time I stood inside St. Peter's Basilica in Rome, its majesty overwhelmed me. The sheer beauty of Michelangelo's dome seemed to lift my soul right out of my body. Later, I joined the Scavi tour that winds below the basilica, down into the ancient pagan cemetery where Peter was buried. There, in the dim light and narrow passageways, I found myself looking at the bones of a murdered Jewish fisherman, his feet cut off so his crucified body could be taken down more easily.

What a paradox. Above me, the most glorious church ever built. Beneath me, the remains of a backwater fisherman. But this man dared to answer Jesus' question, "Who do you say that I am?" And crowning that immense dome above his tomb are the words from today's Gospel, "You are Peter, and upon this rock I will build my Church."

Within you and me is the drama of the lowest and the highest. Every time we confess Christ, humbly, imperfectly, maybe even trembling, we enter that same mystery. The dust of our humanity, touched by the splendor of heaven. God's presence and our dry bones together. Humility and glory. May our lives embrace both the lowest and the highest, like that great basilica, as we profess Jesus

As everyone knows, Fr. Jeremiah Boland is a huge Cubs fan. You may remember, back in June at his retirement celebration, on behalf of the Parish Pastoral Council, Marilyn Jensen and Kim Bredemann presented Fr. Jerry with Cub tickets.

With those tickets, Fr. Jerry, along with some lucky family members, attended Monday night's Crosstown Classic between the Cubs and the White Sox. Not only was it one of the best games of the season - an extra inning battle that was won by his beloved Cubs with a walk-off homer - Fr. Jerry was also honored with a huge scoreboard display in the fifth inning!

What a game, what a night! (Fr. Jerry, you must have given Pete Crow-Armstrong a special blessing before the game!)

Summer with St. Francis

From the book The Life of St. Francis written by St. Bonaventure, a Franciscan monk and mystic, in 1260.

Week 10, Chapter 8

On His Affectionate Piety, and How Irrational Creatures were Affectionate Toward Him

True piety, which, according to the apostle is helpful for all things, had so filled Francis's heart and penetrated its depths that it seemed to have appropriated the man of God completely into its dominion. This is what drew him up to God through devotion, transformed him into Christ through compassion, attracted him to his neighbor through condescension, and symbolically showed a return to the state of original innocence through universal reconciliation with each and every living thing.

Francis longed with heartfelt piety and burned with ardent zeal for the salvation of souls. He used to say that he was filled with the sweetest fragrance and anointed with precious ointment when he heard that many were being converted to the way of truth by the fragrant reputation of the holy friars in the distant regions of the world.

He loved to heap his most desirable blessings upon those friars who by word or deed led sinners to the love of Christ. But the ones who dishonored the religious life by their evil deeds incurred his severest curse: "May you, most holy Lord, and the whole celestial court, and I too, your little one, curse them who disrupt and destroy by their bad example what you have built up and do not cease to build up through the holy friars of this Order."

Then once, when he was disturbed by certain instances of bad example and anxiously prayed to the merciful Father for his sons, he received this response from the Lord: "What's all this worry, you poor bit of a man? Did I make you the shepherd of my Order so that you can forget that it is I who am its principal protector? I chose you for this because you are a simple man and what I would do in you would be ascribed to divine grace and not to human effort. I have called the friars. I will preserve and feed them; and if some fall away, I will call others. Indeed, even if they are yet unborn, I will have them born. No matter how severely this poor little Order is shaken, it will always remain safe by my grace."

Francis had an inborn kindness which was doubled by the kindness of Christ infused in him from above. Therefore, his soul melted at the sight of the poor and infirm, and those to whom he could not extend a helping hand, he extended his affection. Once it happened that one of the friars responded roughly to a beggar who had asked for an alms at an inconvenient time. When the devoted lover of the poor heard this, he ordered the friar to strip himself, cast himself at the beggar's feet, confess his guilt, and beg for his prayers and forgiveness. When he had done this humbly, Francis added sweetly: "When you see a poor man, my brother, an image of the Lord and his poor mother is being placed before you. Likewise in the case of the sick, consider the physical weakness which the Lord took upon himself." It happened once that a poor man met him on his return from Siena, when because of an illness, he was wearing a short mantle over his habit. When he observed the man's misery, he said to his companion: "We should return this mantle to this poor man because it is his. For we got it on loan until we should find someone poorer than ourselves." But his companion, considering the need of his devoted father, obstinately refused. Francis said: "I believe that the great Almsgiver will charge me with theft if I do not give what I have to one who needs it more."

When he considered the primordial source of all things, he was filled with even more abundant piety, calling creatures, no matter how small, by the name of brother or sister because he knew that they had the same source as himself. However, he embraced more affectionately and sweetly those creatures which present a natural reflection of Christ's merciful gentleness and represent him in Scripture symbolism. He often paid to ransom lambs that were being led to their death, remembering that most gentle Lamb who willed to be led to slaughter to pay the ransom of sinners.

One time at Saint Mary of Portiuncula Francis was offered a sheep, which he gratefully accepted in his love of the innocence and simplicity which the sheep by its nature reflects. Francis admonished the little sheep to praise God attentively and to avoid giving any offense to the friars. The sheep carefully observed his instructions when it heard the friars chanting in choir. It would enter the church, genuflect without instructions from anyone, and bleat before the altar of the Virgin, the mother of the Lamb, as if it wished to greet her. Besides, when the most sacred body of Christ was elevated at Mass, it would bow down on bended knee.

Once in Rome, he had with him a little lamb out of reverence for the most gentle Lamb of God. At his departure, he left it in the care of the noble matron, the Lady Jacoba of Settesoli. Now the lamb went with the lady to church, standing reverently by her side as her inseparable companion, as if it had been trained in spiritual matters by the saint. If the lady was late in rising in the morning, the lamb rose and nudged her with its horns and woke her with its bleating, urging her with its nods and gestures to hurry to the church

St. Francis teaching the birds

One time when he was walking with a friar through the marshes of Venice, he came upon a large flock of birds singing among the reeds. When Francis saw them, he said to his companion: "Our sisters the birds are praising their Creator; so we should go in among them and chant the Lord's praises and the canonical hours." When they had entered among them, the birds did not move from the place; and on account of the noise the birds were making, they could not hear each other saying the hours. The saint turned to the birds and said, "Sister birds, stop singing until we have done our duty of praising God!" At once they were silent until they finished their praises. Then Francis gave them permission to sing again...and they immediately resumed singing in their usual way.

When he went to the hermitage of La Verna, birds of different kinds flew around his cell with melodious singing as if rejoicing at his arrival and seemed to be enticing the devoted father to stay. When Francis saw this, he said to his companion: "I see, brother, that it is God's will that we stay here for some time, for our sisters the birds seem so delighted at our presence." When he extended his stay, a falcon that had built its nest there became deeply attached to him. For at the hour of the night of the divine office, the falcon always came to wake him by making noise and singing. This pleased Francis very much because the falcon shook out of him all sluggish laziness. But when Francis was ill, the falcon had pity and did not impose such early vigils on him and, as if instructed by God, it would ring the bell of its voice with a light touch.

Once when he was staying in the hermitage at Greccio, a pack of ravenous wolves were devouring not only animals but also men in the village, and every year hailstones were devastating the fields. When Francis preached, he said to the townspeople: "For the honor and praise of Almighty God I promise you that all this pestilence will depart, and the Lord will look kindly upon you and give you an increase of temporal goods if you believe me and show mercy to yourself by making a good confession and [doing penance]." Once the people did as they were told, neither the wolves nor the hail caused any further trouble. ... Therefore, we should respond piously to the piety of this blessed man, which had such remarkable sweetness and power that it subdued ferocious beasts, tamed the wild, and even trained humans.

Stay tuned next week for Chapter 9 On the Fervor of His Charity and His Desire for Martyrdom.

Creation and Ecumenism: Toward a Shared Christian Witness in an Ecological Age

Franciscan Friar James F. Puglisi, SA examines care for creation as an emerging ecumenical locus in which diverse Christian traditions find convergence without uniformity. Situating the ecological crisis as a theological challenge, he draws upon Orthodox, Catholic, and Protestant insights to articulate a shared anthropological and sacramental vision of creation. He proposes that a renewed Christian response to the ecological crisis must be grounded in prayer, liturgical awareness, and common witness rooted in the recognition of creation as gift and offering.

Father Puglisi is a member of the Franciscan Friars of the Atonement, where he served as Minister General from 2004 to 2014. He is Director Emeritus of the Friars' ecumenical research center, Centro Pro Unione in Rome, and Professor Emeritus of ecclesiology, sacraments, and ecumenism at the Pontifical Athenaeum of Sant'Anselmo, Rome.
